Evidence-Based School Mental Health Interventions

Evidence-Based Resources

A list of the TASN-ATBS Mental Health Initiative 's favorite websites for evidence-based school mental health interventions.

Do you need school interventions that are supported by research?

Evidence-based solutions are those interventions that have been identified as being effective based on research and analysis. Whether you're searching for evidence-based practices, or determining which option is best for your setting, the websites below can assist you in your search. Click on the organization name to access each site.

Where to Find Evidence-Based School Mental Health Interventions

Start Here if you're searching for school mental health interventions that are evidence-based. Each website provides for the opportunity to search based on a variety of factors, including population, programs, and outcomes.

- > California Evidence-Based Clearinghouse for Child Welfare
- > Child Trends: What Works
- Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention: Model Programs Guide
- > SAMHSA's National Registry of Evidence-Based Programs and Practices
- > What Works Clearinghouse

Tools & Guides for Selecting Evidence-Based School Mental Health Practices

If you have already identified some evidence-based school mental health interventions and now need to choose the best option for your school or classroom, these tools may be helpful.

- > Selecting and Implementing Evidence-Based Practices: A Guide for Child and Family Serving Systems
- > Selecting Evidence-Based Programs
- > The Hexagon Tool: Exploring Content

Questions? Comments? Want to find more? Check out our website at http://kansasasd.com or contact Christin Sheldon at christins@tasnatbs.org